ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

invention for provides apparatus present an efficient communication of messages such as voice messages in The apparatus includes an a telephone answering system. input to receive an incoming call, a recorder for recording outgoing messages, a memory to store incoming and outgoing messages, a comparator for comparing caller information to a client list, a player for playing a particular outgoing message to a calling party if the caller information matches a specific client in the client list, and a menu for identifying members of the client list and to identify locations in the memory for each of the members. particular outgoing message includes a question previously posed by the specific client and a response to the question.

463880_1.DOC